Background
Founded in 1991, the National Breast Cancer Coalition’s (NBCC) mission is to end breast cancer through the power of action and advocacy. Since its founding, NBCC has been at the vanguard of the breast cancer movement elevating breast cancer to an issue of national significance, leveraging billions of federal dollars for research and care, and empowering tens of thousands of breast cancer survivors to become effective advocates for themselves, and for all those at risk of breast cancer. NBCC’s activism has generated more than $3 billion new dollars for breast cancer research.

NBCC links hundreds of organizations and tens of thousands of individuals from across the country into a dynamic, diverse coalition that gives breast cancer a meaningful voice in Washington, DC, and state houses, in laboratories and health care institutions, and in local communities everywhere.

There are two corporate entities that make up NBCC. The National Breast Cancer Coalition operates as an IRS 501(c)(4) organization that lobbies Congress and other decision-makers for public policies that impact breast cancer research, diagnosis and treatment. NBCC’s sister organization, the National Breast Cancer Coalition Fund, is an IRS 501(c)(3) organization that focuses on programs in science, education and training and access to care. The Artemis Project, is the research component of NBCC. Project LEAD and other programs involve the training, education and empowerment of breast cancer advocates to be effective in every aspect of the fight to end breast cancer. NBCC educates women to make their own informed decisions and to take an active role wherever breast cancer decisions are made.

By increasing federal funding for breast cancer research; monitoring how research funds are spent; expanding access to quality health care for all; and ensuring that trained advocates influence all decision making that affects breast cancer, NBCC’s collective power brings focus to ending breast cancer.
